Bylaw No. 2858

An application has been submitted to amend the Quadra Island zoning bylaw to allow for the installation of private moorage facilities on land described as a portion of unsurveyed foreshore or Crown land covered by water being part of the bed of Crawford Anchorage, Erasmus Island, Range 1, Coast Land District (ILMB File No. 1412703). The applicant has applied to rezone the subject property from Access Two (AC-2), which does not allow for private moorage facilities, to Access One (AC-1) which does, to allow for access to their adjacent upland property as shown on the adjacent map.

Bylaw No. 2865

Quadra Island Harbour Authority has submitted an application to amend the Quadra Island zoning bylaw to permit administrative offices in the Marine Commercial One (MC-1) zone on land described as the filled portion of the foreshore of District Lot 1597, Sayward District, in Quathiaski Cove on Quadra Island

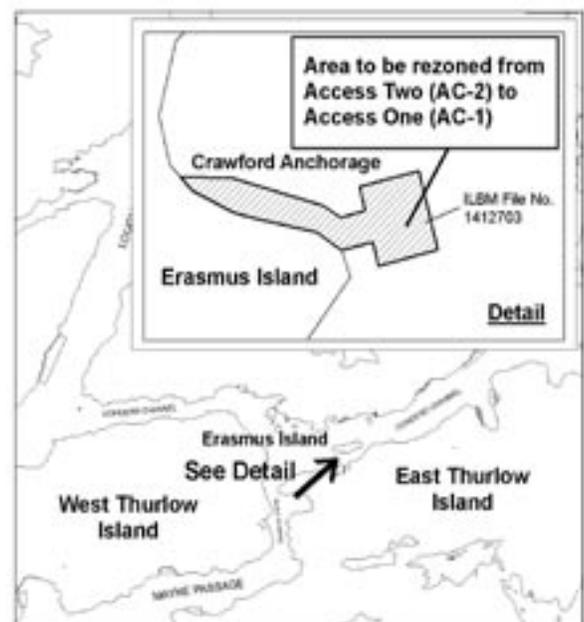

The intent and purpose of proposed Bylaw No. 2865 is to amend the Marine Commercial One (MC-1) zone to include marina facilities as a permitted principal use and delete “marina facilities” from permitted accessory uses. In addition, the definition of “marina” will be amended to include administrative office use and re-worded for clarity.

A copy of the proposed bylaws and related information may be inspected at the regional district offices, 600 Comox Road, Courtenay, BC between the hours of 8:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m., Monday through Friday, from February 2, 2006 to February 16, 2006 (excluding holidays). In addition the proposed bylaws may be viewed on the regional district website at www.rdcs.bc.ca.

At the public hearing all persons who deem their interest in property affected by the proposed bylaws will be afforded an opportunity to be heard on matters contained therein.

Please note that legal considerations prevent the regional district from considering any representations made after the close of the public hearing. If you cannot attend the public hearing, all written submissions (mailed or electronic) must be received by this office no later than 4:30 p.m., February 16, 2006.

Editor,

The letter from Wayne Assal in issue #360 of Discovery Islander, states that the inevitable collapse of Canada will be found to be mainly due to the "population's loss of historical consciousness". My research shows that United Empire Loyalists, whose numbers included a high percentage of professionals, officials and officers, brought concepts of popular government and democracy to Canada, concepts quite different from those brought by immigrants coming directly from Britain. It may have happened that without their arrival and expectations, democracy of any sort in Canada might have been put off for some time. Those who settled along the St. Lawrence River, referred to as "Canadian Loyalists" were for the most part dissimilar to those who fled to the maritime provinces. By comparison they were predominantly uneducated frontier people and recent immigrants who were living in upper New York, some of whom were driven from their homes by unscrupulous neighbors who used the cause of the Revolution to steal their property. There resulted bitter fighting along the frontier and subsequently a long Loyalist hatred in the new province for anything American.

The British government created the Constitutional Act of 1791 to reward the uprooted Loyalists, thus satisfying the Loyalist preference for simple ownership of land and representational government, both previously denied by the Quebec Act. It is my guess that the Canadian Loyalists were not so much concerned with the "philosophical nature" of their relationship with America as they were with their desire to own land without the fear of invasion and takeover as well as the right to have a say in their governance.

I think all is not black and

white when considering our responsibility as citizens. Having been born an American, I was bathed by the culture into thinking that Americans are "just", and "true" and "defend democracy at all cost". But I gradually became aware of another side to the story which was incongruous with the accepted view as well as the Constitution. The American story is currently in a free fall which I predicted in my own mind long ago at the time I chose to emigrate. I felt that Canada did more to truly uphold peace and equality than the does the United States. Our decision to move to Canada was a philosophical one. We wanted to become Canadian citizens but it meant revoking U.S. citizenship. As we both still had family ties to the States we didn't feel free to do that. We participated in local government and kept ourselves attuned to Canadian politics and issues. As to using up the resources, I tend to think we have had enough to offer Canada to counter that or we wouldn't have been permitted to live here in the first place. Or, we might all ask the First Nations, who is using up the resources? Eventually the revoking of citizenship was deemed unconstitutional so we were free to become citizens. I vote now but there are still many Canadians who do not. If anything causes the "collapse" of Canada it will be people's assumption that a democracy runs itself.

The accusation that Mr. Assal makes about American born Canadians forming a "fifth column" is absurd. If the U.S. attacks Canada, God forbid, I wouldn't be surprised to see the expat Americans at the head of the resistance. I suspect as a loose group we would be the first to say that it is very important for Canadians to be concerned with U.S. policy. Sharing a border, we would be fools to think that we will go unnoticed or that we will necessarily receive the same respect Canada generally shows the world. Ask Maher Arar if Canada should question U.S. policy.

I firmly believe that the real strength of a country devolves from the ability of each of its citizens to make moral and ethical judgements that enhance individual potential without harm to others. When this fails it is imperative to have a democratic system and just laws to rely on. But please don't try to tell me the best citizen is the "patriot". Too many patriots I have met are like religious fanatics believing that "the end justifies the means".

Dear Mr. Hahn,

It's not often we write to politicians or heads of corporations, but reading of the changes you propose to BC Ferries operations, particularly for local ferry routes, we're writing now!

We find it reprehensible that a corporation which has stated that customer service is a priority would remove the deck shelter on the Quadra ferry. The hardship and discomfort this has caused to the elderly, the disabled, parents with young children and others is unacceptable. It is such cavalier action that rightfully causes resentment towards BC Ferries.

Equally deplorable is that you continue to gouge users of

QUADRA IMPRESSIONS

Beginning the New Year with a bang.

or

When is the power coming back on?

Christmas and New years are a fading memory.

I got to cook a Christmas dinner after all. In fact I helped stuff and cook several at the Christmas dinner held at the Legion this year. We had a great team under the direction of Al Bent. Thanks to all the people who peeled and cut and cooked and organized. When the first crew could no longer look at turkey, stuffing and gravy, a new team arrived to serve and do clean up. I understand that this dinner is provided for by an anonymous benefactor. We are grateful for your generosity. Everyone enjoyed their Christmas meal complete with all the fixings.

New years came and went. Over the holidays I noticed the tides were incredibly high, the highest I've seen them since I arrived. Winds blew and there were white caps in the bay leaving the shore littered with piles of logs and debris. The creek that runs past my cabin was swallowed by the ocean. Logs that had jammed the mouth of the creek and hadn't budged for months were finally washed away.

New Year's Day blew and before the evening descended I had a sense that one of the frequent winter power failures that I have heard so much about was at hand. I quickly unplugged all electronic devices, and lo and behold within minutes of doing so the hydro went out. It was pretty exciting down by the ocean. My little cabin was being battered by wind and it sounded like huge limbs were falling down all around. I was ready to test my survival skills. I had stocked up on candles months ago upon the advice of my sister so I was okay there, or so I thought, but it seems that I had used them up trying to create some ambience on these dark nights and had only three tea lights left. My flashlight was just about out of battery power. Okay so I won't be doing any reading. What does one do during in a time like this? Conversation is good if you have someone to converse with. Well I just pulled the covers over my head and called it an early night expecting that I would wake up to the hum of the refrigerator. Hmmm no such luck.

I opened the door expecting to see a huge mess, but all I saw were small spruce branches littered across the lawn. No big limbs or trees down. Mother Nature was just stirring it up.

It took a full 24 hours before hydro was restored to Heriot Bay. All in all I made out pretty well. I missed the deadline for sending in my story, but no worry, no hurry, I seem to be integrating pretty well and I'm finding out, all about, being on Quadra Time.

Cheers. May the New Year bring you all you dare to dream.

the local ferry routes for basic transportation. Local routes are quite different from the major routes from the mainland to the island. Yet it is these routes that are singled out for percentage fare and fuel surcharge increases double that of the major routes. This at a time when BC Ferries Corporation declared a profit of $45 million last year (despite high fuel costs) and now receives another $4.5 million due to reduced property taxes. Wanting to eliminate the frequent-user ticketbook system is also a cash grab. The present system works quite nicely yet your corporation can't leave well enough alone. Instituting the "stored value" debit fare cards with a 90-day expiry date is much more inconvenient than the present system and will breed more resentment as expired cards with money left on them become invalid.

A final comment about local ferry routes. We have found that the captain and crew of these vessels provide exemplary service. That the captain has discretion about things like waiting a few minutes to fill a ferry is appreciated and understood by residents. And even then, most of the sailings are on time! Equally appreciated by locals is not being subjected to the ticket sales cut-off times as on major routes. People on the smaller islands appreciate their ferry crews and the consideration they give to neighbours. There is no need to impose restrictions that can only cause service to decline and further increase resentment towards the corporation.

If your corporation is not just driven by the bottom line and truly does care about service to its customers, then it behooves you to listen to the Ferry Advisory Committees. Otherwise, you stand to lose what little good will remains towards a system that is increasingly viewed as hostile and uncaring.

Yours truly,

Dear David Hahn,

I am writing in regard to the upcoming changes on our "highway to Quadra", our local BC Ferry.

I would ask you to reconsider the wisdom of the recent $3 fare increase, proposed further fare increases, proposed replacement of our paper commuter paper tickets with plastic cards, proposed ticket booth closure one minute before sailings, and loss of the deck trailer for those who can't climb the stairs of the ship.

I am sure you have had many letters outlining all the problems these changes will cause for us, and I won't trouble you by repeating them all again.

These changes may be appropriate for large sailings to and from the mainland, but are inappropriate for our small ferry route, which seems to be working just fine. Even when the ferry is occasionally late, it is usually for good and justifiable reason, not because it is being held up by late arriving passengers or vehicles.

I have heard that the BC Ferry Corporation made a profit in the past year! I would ask you to use some of this profit to subsidize small runs such as ours, so that we can continue to enjoy our trips, so that we can still afford to travel this "highway", so that we can share our commuter tickets with our family members (remembering that you have our money in advance while we save tickets at home), so that we can still get aboard our ferry even if there is a line-up at the ticket booth, so that our seniors can remain independent and take themselves on foot to Campbell River, and so that when we board with a heavy load, we don't have to carry it up the stairs.

Yours truly,
Joyce Baker

To The Honourable George Abbott, BC Minister of Health:

After many long months of visits to laboratories and specialists in Campbell River, Victoria and Vancouver, from my home on Quadra Island, I was diagnosed with a very rare variant of multiple myeloma, an immune system disorder called primary amyloidosis. The result is that my bone marrow produces only very abnormal white blood cells that harm all of my organs. This disease kills about 80% of those afflicted within two years. Until late last year there was no known effective treatment.

A recent study in the U.S. showed promising results when amyloidosis patients were given a "tandem" bone marrow transplant, meaning that chemotherapy to kill the bone marrow is followed by a bone marrow transplant (called a rescue by the pros), and this is done twice in immediate succession. The risks of fatal infection or uncontrolled bleeding causing death are higher than with a typical bone marrow transplant, particularly because the procedure is repeated within a short time. My hematologist has decided that given my relative youth (51 years old) and early diagnosis, I am an excellent candidate for the treatment.

The BC government has put me on disability because I am unable to work. While it does not cover all the costs to feed my family and pay the bills, I am thankful for every penny I receive. All my travel for treatment has been free. Volunteer drivers and cars from the Freemason/Cancer Society program as well as free ferry passes have gotten me to appointments and for that I am truly grateful. The healthcare professionals I have seen have been extraordinary in their willingness to see me on short or no notice and have gone to extreme lengths to schedule tests, even if it meant having staff work outside normal hours so that I might be spared waiting or travel. If not for these people and their Herculean efforts, I might well have succumbed before a diagnosis was made. Is there a problem with this story? There is. The people in the system work. The system itself does not.

While the doctors are more than willing to treat me, I have now been waiting for a bed in the VGH transplant unit since December 19, 2005. I am still number one on the transplant waiting list.

Who can I yell at? I have a totally disabling and deadly disease and everyone I have dealt with has been kind, professional and willing to do anything in their power to make me well. They cannot, however, find me a hospital bed. There are none available. So I wait. My transplant coordinator is so bothered by my suffering that in her twice-weekly call I hear in her voice the frustration I share, having to tell me I must wait still a little longer. The longer I wait, the sicker I get and the greater the risk I will die because of the procedure. I cannot even go home to see my wife and 7- and 9-year-old daughters on Quadra Island because I risk losing my spot if I am not able to go immediately to VGH once a bed comes free. Disability does not cover my extended family's costs for me to stay at their small three-bedroom home in Richmond. Thankfully, my sister and her family are very willing to care for me, but were it my choice, I would not so greatly inconvenience their lives or mine.

If I cannot get a hospital bed, I pity all those who are less sick than me. If they need to be admitted to a hospital for any non-emergency treatment they will certainly get a lot sicker before they get better. I personally am dying to get in and it does not seem to help.

Michael Windrim

My Dad and I

Although my family lived in North Battleford, Saskatchewan my father (a self-employed journeyman carpenter) and I were living near Three Hills, Alberta for a summer, building and renovating houses. My father had to go where the work was and the economy was bad back home which is what brought us to this small prairie town.

My father had a strong work ethic, and a family of six kids to feed, so he worked six days a week year-round. Holidays were the break you took when you were injured or couldn't find work (needless to say there were few of those). That's why it was a real treat to just be taking a drive with my dad on a Sunday afternoon. Suddenly my father pulled to the side of the road and asked, "Do you want to drive?" I wasn't sure if he was kidding or what - after all I was only 14 and no licence. Once I got over the shock I had no choice but to accept his offer.

My first experience of driving was interesting - to say the least. The good news is nobody was injured and damage to property was minimal. Just kidding. There were no other vehicles on the road and this was the prairies (the roads don't get any straighter). The drive was rather uneventful.

This experience was extra special for me for a few reasons. For one - my father rarely gave up control of anything. For him to allow me to drive his car was more than unexpected. Secondly, out of all my siblings I got to spend more time with my dad. Working that far from home meant the rest of the family saw him on occasional weekends - once every two or three months. I got to spend that entire summer working side by side with him - not to mention all the other times we worked together. I guess that's where I got my love for carpentry. Lastly, six months after that summer my father came down with a disease that ate away at his body, stealing his pride and dignity over the course of a year. He died just after my 16th birthday.

That Sunday afternoon drive is one of my favorite memories of my father. When I think of that time I can't help but consider differences and similarities between my heavenly Father and my earthly one. Although my earthly father rarely gave up control of anything and only gave me the wheel of his car that one time, God allows me to make all the mistakes I am intent on making. If I want to take the wheel and steer my own life He'll let me - any time I want. But life's roads aren't as vacant or as straight as prairie roads. I've learned it's much safer to let Him do the driving.

I rarely saw my father, other than those opportunities I had to work with him. He never saw me get my license and I never drove with him again. But my heavenly Father is with me at all times and He has been there to see every major event in my life. He promises never to leave me or forsake me and so far in my life He has kept that promise. Sure, there have been times when I wondered, and I may not always recognize His presence, but He is always there. When I fool myself into believing I can handle life on my own, that I am master of my own life (and inevitably get myself into trouble), He is there to take the wheel and get me back on the right road again. Drive on Dad! I'm happy to watch the scenery along the way.

Thank-you

Quadra Foods and Heriot Bay Store for donating the supplies for our annual polar bear swim. Every year we give out free hot dogs and hot chocolate on January 1st. A great way to start the year. This was our 10th year and we look forward to it each time. Also a huge thank-you to our husbands for all of their help.

See you next year,
Mava and Sally

Dear Editor,

Let's hear it, all together now, "We're Number 4, we're number 4", that's right, we traded a potential cabinet minister for a member of the 4th party. While Ms. Bell may be a great person she cannot promote and care for the North Island constituency in the same manner as would a cabinet minister or indeed a member of the governing party.

It was not that long ago our province was FIRST in economy, only to be reduced to LAST, (with the change of our provincial government we are now back on top or very close), is this what we want for Vancouver Island or indeed the North Island constituency?

As a columnist noted "how could anyone vote against a cut in GST, a guaranteed shortened wait time for hospital services or a $1200 a year child care benefit, unless they are a member of the walking dead?"

While I believe the Harper government will fulfill all election promises made within the confines of a minority government I do not think the upgrading of our forces base or other North Island advantages will be at the top of the governments must do, will do list

Big Tree Walk

If you'd like to visit the big trees featured on last issue's cover (there are a number of Douglas Fir and Cedar over 12 ft in circumference and the largest is 17 ft or 5.5 m around!) why not join an informal walk through Main Lake Provincial Park to the 'Stramberg Giants' on Saturday, February 4.

Meet at the 'Vic's Marsh' parking pullout on Village Bay Lake Rd. at 10:00 am (you can't miss it, on the left immediately as you reach the lake ~500m before the bridge, see map below). Be prepared for a 3-4+ hour round trip hike. There are a pair of large fir less than halfway as well if you can't make the full hike for any reason.

Gum boots or good hiking boots recommended as well as a waterproof jacket and even an umbrella if the forecast is for rain. Bring a lunch and snacks. All ages welcome kids will love this mostly flat hike mostly on old logging grades, there's lots to see en route: old homestead, beaver dams, wetlands, maturing second growth forest, meandering creeks and of course the big trees at the end of the line where there is a short loop to walk around the small marsh which is home to the old trees. Rain or shine! A good opportunity to chat with others about the role of, concerns for, and plans within our 'new' provincial parks.

Meet here at 10 am
Sat. Feb. 4th

Trails Committee News

As we begin another year of trail maintenance, I would like to thank all the volunteers who have contributed so many hours of their time, keeping Quadra's hiking trails open for public use. This year we hope to re-build some ageing bridges on the Morte Lake, Shellalligan and Chinese Mtn. Trails, start work on the new trail to Surge Narrows Provincial Park, as well as routine annual maintenance on all trails. New volunteers are always needed to help with our many projects. If you are able to contribute and would like to be part of our volunteer team, please phone Judy or Richard at 285-2922.

This spring the second addition of the Quadra Island Hiking Trails map will be available at local stores, with three new trails for all to enjoy. All the proceeds from the sale of this map provide the Trails Committee with the necessary funding for tools, supplies and materials. So please support us by buying the map for yourselves and your visitors this summer.

I would like to extend a special thank you to Susan Wilson & Joyce Elliott from Quadra Island Vacation Rentals for their very generous cash donation, and to Steven Swanson and Quadrate Ventures for transporting a large supply of recently milled fir.

Album Review

Mr. Completely - Twice on Sundays

Those of you from Cortes Island might remember vocalist, guitarist Jamie Robertson from his years working on the Cortes ferry. Quadra Island residents in their early 40's may recall bassist Goerge Milatinovic from Carihi School. Together along with guitarist Richard Spencer and drummer Rod Campbell they make up: Mr. Completely, Campbell River's hottest rock and roll band. Formerly known as 'Month of Sundays', Mr. C. have just released their first CD titled 'Twice on Sundays'. Here's a review -

The CD opens with 'Never See You Again' a straight forward rocker with Eagles-like harmonies. It's followed by the first single 'Walk Away' complete with some beautiful Spanish guitar. The album then plows into the bluesey 'Let Me Know' with Jamie working his vocal pipes to the fullest.

The next tunes are all slated for single release; 'Without Warning' is an up-tempo ballad dedicated to families of missing women everywhere. 'Before Too Long' is a bitter sweet love song while 'Runaway Little Girl' is a pop-rocker with a singalong chorus. The Richard Spencer penned and sang 'Courteously' is next with its new-wavy Beatles sound. This one is a little different from the rest of the disc. The following three numbers: 'Rich Man, Poor Man', 'Never Be The One' and 'Don't Try To Stop Me' are all straightup classic southern rock style bringingto mind Skynyrd or ZZ Top.

The group then rips into a rockin' version of the Animals classic 'House of the Rising Sun' before closing the set out with the haunting 'Into Your Eyes' which features some blistering guitar work.

Pick up your copy of 'twice on Sundays' at CD Plus, Music Plant and the Musicians Trading Post in Campbell River.

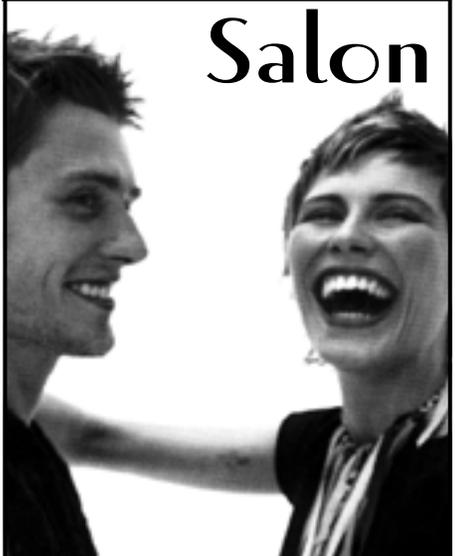

Be sure to catch Mr. Completely's CD release party Saturday February 4 at the Voodoo Lounge. Doors open at 8 pm and there's no cover. So come out and support some local rock and roll.

Fine Arts Focus at Quadra Elementary involves our community!

Quadra Elementary School has been pretty busy. After a nice break for the holidays we are back at work and having fun too. The school has spent the month of January focusing on fine arts as part of our school focus. On January 12th we were fortunate to have some local artists share their talents with us -- James Almond, Brad Assu, Brent Henry, Fred Herbert, Bridget Walshe, Helen Moats and Chris Rose helped kick off this focus on the Arts, showing the students their art. An animation workshop by Dave Coad grabbed student's attention. A Fine Arts Gallery will be set up for all parents and families to come and view from Feb. 21-23rd (call the school for specific viewing times). On Feb. 8th at 1:00, a performance by Jambaya Marimba will entertain us.

An Arts Club has also started, thanks to the hard work and dedication of Andrea Blaseckie and Luise Grav, Kaz Jones, Claude Desjardins, Maru Jolar, Leslie Matthews, Bridget Walshe and Brigit Nelson. Donations of art supplies or dollars to buy more would be welcome.

School Trustee Helen Moats attended our most recent PAC meeting. Helen told us about her background in education and passion for learning. We were pleased to hear what Helen had to say, and are look forward to showing off for the rest of the trustees in the future.

Another focus at Quadra Elementary is Global Social Responsibility. The children have been busy learning about that as well -- the Terry Fox Run, collecting food for the food bank & Cystic Fibrosis Bowling for Breath.

As you can see the community of Quadra Island is deeply involved with our children and we thank you for it. Look for more updates about our wonderful school in future Discovery Islanders.

Quadra Island Garden Club

It is the season for pruning trees and shrubs and a well-timed topic for the February Garden Club meeting. We are very fortunate to have an expert in plants, garden design and maintenance, Christine North from Gardens of Distinction in Weybridge England, as guest speaker on Feb. 13th, 7pm. With horticultural training and more than 20 years experience, she has designed gardens for the Chelsea Flower Show, and has won awards at both the Hampton Court Flower Show and the Prince's Trust Garden. We are very fortunate to have such a qualified instructor discuss how to look after our February garden. She will show us the practical skills of pruning wisteria, roses, fruit trees, larger shrubs and trees. Christine is a specialist lecturer on a tour of Vancouver Island, and we are looking forward to welcoming her on Quadra. Her web page is at www.gardensofdistinction.co.uk

We are seeing signs of Spring this week. The snowdrops have been open for awhile, winter aconite is showing its bright yellow flowers, the hellebores are in bloom, my anemone and crocus are budded and waiting for the sun and warm temperatures - soon!! When the weather allows us to spend time in our gardens pruning and tidying up the winter debris we could divide plants for the perennial table - it is not too early. Does anyone have a daffodil flower to show off to the club? It is your turn perhaps, to bring a small bouquet to share with the group. Donate the magazines you have just finished reading, while we still have time to sit around on rainy days. Drop ins welcome $2 at the door or buy a membership $10 annually. Quadra Community Centre.

Photographer at Epiphany Gallery

Quadra resident, Peter Tolman, is exhibiting his photographs at the Epiphany Art Gallery in the Upper Realm at Quathiaski Cove. This show features an impressive array of photographs taken mostly in Japan and South East Asia when Peter was teaching ESL courses in Japan last year. The photographs are very interesting and depict rural scenes as well as amazing glimpses of the people of the land. Peter is truly a talented photographer and you can meet him this Saturday, February 4, between 12 and 2 at the Epiphany Gallery. Call 285-2626 for more information.

Quadra Island Quilt and Garden Tour 2006

The snowdrops are in bloom, the deer are eating the new crocus leaves as fast as they grow, and the daffodils are poking through the ground. Spring is on the way with summer and the 2006 Quilt and Garden Tour coming into view. This year the tour is on June 17 and 18 and we would love to have some Quadra Islanders volunteer their gardens. Your garden is not ready, you say. A garden is never ready. It will always be perfect next year. You may know what needs still to be done. You can imagine its potential in 5 or 10 years.

Visitors to your garden will see it through different eyes and enjoy it all. Being on the Quilt and Garden Tour is really a very pleasant experience and it is a great way to get all those garden projects that are half finished actually finished. If you have been contemplating volunteering your garden for the tour, or just want to know what is involved, let us know. All types of gardens are welcome from tiny flower gardens to large vegetable gardens. We would love to hear from you all. All funds raised go to the Quadra Island Recreation Society and the Quadra Quilt Guild.

For more information or to volunteer your garden, contact any member of the Quilt and Garden Tour Committee 2006: Bev Barclay, Anne Doolittle, Shirley Duncan, Susan Enns, Eileen Mackay, Elaine McQuade.

Friday Flicks – Stage Beauty

February 10th, Q.C.C. Adm: $4.50, student/snr $3.50. Doors 7:30 – Showtime 7:45

Stage Beauty is a coarse-grained movie set in the 1660's of Restoration London, just after Charles II took the throne. Charles had no taste whatsoever for the Puritanism that preceded his reign and immediately reopened the theatres, which still featured men in all the female roles. Billy Crudup, with a slender waist, long lashes, and a bit of a flirtatious pucker, is Ned Kynaston, the reigning Desdemona, Ophelia, and Juliet of the day. The men in the audience, many of them wearing wigs and barrel bloomers (they're almost in drag themselves), go mad for Kynaston, and the women are titillated and entertained. Then Charles, at the urging of his mistress, decides that men may no longer play women, and Kynaston is out of a job.

Stage Beauty is an enjoyably bawdy romantic comedy that's "more theatrical than an Elton John party, and only slightly less camp." When it's concentrating on delivering laughs, Stage Beauty is a thing of ribald beauty. Richard Griffiths commits grand larceny as a powdered knight, and Crudup provides far tastier mince than your local butcher. Almost as funny - and far more surprising - is Rupert Everett's foppish Charles II. The most memorable scene may be when Kynaston teaches Maria the dynamics of the death scene in Othello from both male and female perspectives.

The tale is intriguing and the script is erudite. British stage director turned filmmaker Richard Eyre seems ready to enlighten and entertain, even as he targets the deeper emotions of the characters. Stage Beauty's dissection of gender, fame, and power--and where they meet with a whoosh--is never less than fascinating.

Make Saturdays Super With Art

The Super Saturday Art Making Program at the Campbell River Art Gallery was a huge success in 2005. Each activity saw an average of 24 participants ranging in ages from 1 year to 70 years. Art Making activities at Super Saturdays included magic drawings, gesture drawing, and recycled sculpture, as well as collaboration and installation art.

If you haven't already participated in the Super Saturday Program at the Campbell River Art Gallery 2006 might be the year for you and your family to try something new together. The Super Saturday program is run on a drop-in basis every second Saturday beginning Feb. 4th. The sessions run from 1-3 pm and admission is by donation. This program is a great opportunity for children and families to spend some quality time together exploring new art making techniques. There will be a new technique introduced each session by a host of local artists and volunteers. Each activity is inspired by the current exhibitions in the Campbell River Art Gallery.

Some of the upcoming activities for 2006 include "Our Forest, Our Home" on Feb. 4th when participants will make forest charcoal drawings inspired by the work of artist Nerrisa Ng whose drawings are currently on display in the Main Gallery in an exhibition titled "Transformation". On Feb. 18th we will spend the afternoon investigating the techniques that Paula Maloney has used to create a series of miniature paintings for her exhibition "Umbræ" in the Discovery Gallery. We will create our own "Miniature Marvels" on paper that has been dyed with tea and Kool-Aid. These are just a few of the exciting art making activities planned for the new year at the Campbell River Art Gallery's Super Saturday Program.

For more information or to pick up a Super Saturday schedule you can drop by the Gallery located at 1235 Shopper's Row (in the Tyee Plaza) or phone 287-2261. The Campbell River Art Gallery is open Tuesday-Saturday from 12-5 pm.

The continuing Ferry saga!

As I said in my last report, we will be meeting as a small group with David Hahn, President and CEO of BC Ferry Service (BCFS). I have now secured a date for February 9th here on Quadra. We will be expecting him to give us some answers to the burning questions that need answering. His responses will be part of the subject matter for our public meeting to be held on Saturday, February 18th at 3:00 pm at the Community Centre. I hope that all of you will be able to attend to help us decide "Where to from here?"

Public meeting on Ferry issues - Saturday, February 18th, 3:00 pm, Quadra Island Community Centre

Please mark this meeting in your calendars! Look for the ads and posters also.

I would also like thank all of you for the wonderful response that I have been getting in the way of copies of letters being sent to all of the "appropriate" parties regarding the dastardly deeds of the Ferry Service. The phone calls and emails are coming in daily and I hope that they will continue. We need all of the support that we can get.

I have now had two conversations with a human rights lawyer regarding the shelter on the deck of the ferry. By next issue I will have some news for you on this item. I want it to be finalized before making any announcements.

Continuing pressure (repeated from last issue)

In the meantime, I hope that islanders will continue to flood BCFS CEO David Hahn with letters by email, fax or mail. These should be copied to as many of the people on the list that I provided in an earlier issue and posted on the ferry, and also include at the end of this paragraph. I would also ask that you copy me by email. I will continue to try to keep the media interested and provide them with new info as it happens in the interest of keeping the pressure on. Individual FAC members are fully participating in the overall exercise, each with their own expertise. This is a group effort and I hope that the "group" will end up being the entire population of the CR/Quadra/Cortes ferry route. Email contact info: <mailto:David.Hahn@bcferries.com>David.Hahn@bcferries.com and <mailto:martin.crilly@bcferrycommission.com>martin.crilly@bcferrycommission.com

I will stop here for this issue, as I do not want to distract anyone from the issues at hand. There are many other issues that I will bring you up to date on as soon as we have these ferry issues under control. For the time being we all need to focus.

So, that is about it for now. Please feel free to call me between the hours of 8:30 am and 7:00 pm, Monday through Friday (not on weekends, folks!) at 285-3355, or you can fax me at 285-3533 or you can email me anytime at abramfam@oberon.ark.com, or by mail at Box 278 in the Cove, V0P 1N0

Tips to make high tech work on Island time

A Get the Drive to Organize

Remember when you read that computers were going to allow you to replace paper documents and would give speedy and reliable access to your records? Well, most of us are not at the "speedy and reliable" stage. There's still something comforting about having important documents in a physical form, tucked away in your file cabinet. Misfile a piece of paper and you'll be tearing through a mountain of folders to find it; misfile a necessary resume on your hard drive and you'll still be tearing through a pile of virtual folders (thank the gods for the Search function). However, the best solution to a list of unsorted documents is the same as for the file cabinet in the corner: create folders and put files into them so they're accessible and easily backed up.

I would suggest starting with paper and pencil to jot down the kinds of categories you'd like to create. For instance, I have a "Personal" section which is divided into "Family" and "Friends", and if I wanted to, each could be further divided into other sub categories like "Letters", "Jokes", etc. Maybe you want a "House" category ("Taxes", "Mortgage", "Maintenance") or "Business" ("Letters", "Legal", "Taxes"): anything that helps sort out the documents that life creates. One of the convenient things about doing this filing on a computer is that it all can be easily reorganized later. If you find that something doesn't work as you first thought it would, you can rearrange them with the mouse instead of moving stacks of paper.

When you have an idea of what you're going to call your folders, open Windows Explorer, press the Windows start key (lower left between the Alt and Ctrl) plus the letter "E" so you can see the "My Documents" in the folder list and click on the + just to its left so its own list expands. To add a new major category click "My Documents", go to "File", "New", "Folder": then type the name of the folder in the box that appears and press "Enter". To add a sub category, click the main folder (e.g "House"), and then go to "File", "New", "Folder" and type its name (e.g. "Maintenance"). If you don't like the name: click the folder, press F2 and rename it. With the folders in place, you can start moving files into them: click on the file, hold down the mouse button and drag it to the appropriate folder (cut and paste is and alternative way to accomplish this). You can rename files as you go or delete them if they're no longer of use.

I would recommend also moving your email to the My Documents folder. First make a folder in My Documents called "email"; open Outlook Express and go to "Tools", "Options", click "Maintenance", "Store Folder", and change the location to C:\My Documents\email. The next time you start Outlook Express the program will move your mail to that folder, and it can more easily be included in your backup routine. I haven't found a way to move the address book; Mr Gates seems to think it needs to be where it is (C:\Documents and Settings\\Application Data\Microsoft\Address Book) but you can export it (send a copy) to your email folder: open the address book in Outlook Express, go to "File", "Export", "Address Book(wab)", and navigate to your email folder in My Documents.

Keeping your documents (including pictures, music and email) in a convenient location separate from the program files will allow you to easily clean up unwanted files and to back up the ones you don't want to live without. After writing this and referring to my own My Documents folder, I see a pile of skeletons. I think I need to toss them on the bone pile (and then back up my files, of course).

G.E. Free Zone Proposed

During the grey and stormy winter days, many gardeners are passing the hours dreaming of fragrant blooms and rows of tasty veggies ripening in the summer sun. Some local growers are also working on a campaign to establish the Regional District of Comox-Strathcona (RDCS) as a genetically engineered free crop zone.

Genetically engineered (GE) crops are those that are manipulated in a laboratory by inserting genetic material, often from a different organism or species.

According to the National Farmers Union, most of the corn, canola, and soybeans commercially grown in Canada have been genetically altered. Genetic material has been added to make the crops resistant to herbicides or toxic for pests. Canada, the U.S., China, and Argentina are the four biggest producers of GE crops in the world.

Cortes resident Kyenne Brussell is one of a growing number of Canadians who are very concerned about the potential dangers of GE crops.

"These crops have not evolved naturally. Our systems don't have the enzymes to digest them properly," said Kyenne over the phone from her home.

She pointed to the negative health effects of GE foods as documented in Deborah Koons' film 'The Future of Food'. One woman interviewed in the film described having a severe allergic reaction after eating tortillas made from GE corn. In a study conducted on mice that were fed GE potatoes, rates of cancer were very high. And butterflies observed eating GE corn were dying at a rate of 40%.

"The pollinators are dying because their systems aren't designed to take in things like pig bladder pollen," contended Kyenne. "Life normally changes and mutates slowly, but this is happening very quickly."

Kyenne is at the forefront of the initiative to make the RDCS a GE free zone. She has hosted film and information nights in various communities including Quadra and Cortes, and has distributed petitions and organized a letter writing campaign.

Kyenne was inspired to launch the initiative when she learned that the Powell River

www.discoveryislander.ca

Regional District became the first GE free crop zone in Canada in June 2004. The Powell River Coalition for Safe Food, backed by local farming and environmental organizations, succeeded in persuading the regional district board to officially designate the region a GE free crop zone.

"The zone is not regulated at this stage, rather it is a statement of intention and support," she explained. "It would be very difficult to regulate."

There are many advantages to designating an area a GE free zone, Kyenne said. One is that it helps to ensure seed stocks remain in the public domain.

Biotech corporations such as Monsanto, inventor of the herbicide 'Roundup', are actively patenting seeds. Farmers must buy a license to use Monsanto's Roundup-ready seeds. These seeds will survive the application of Roundup while the vegetation around them dies.

Saskatchewan farmer Percy Schmeiser, a seed developer and saver, was surprised to find Roundup-ready canola growing in one of his fields—when he hadn't purchased or planted the seeds. He was even more surprised when Monsanto launched a lawsuit against him for growing their seed without a license.

Despite insisting that the seed must have blown off a truck passing by his farm, Schmeiser was found guilty of patent infringement. According to 'The Future of Food', farmers like Schmeiser feel Monsanto is targeting them to intimidate other farmers into not saving seed.

Potential lawsuits are not the only concern. Organic farmers worry that if GE seeds were to establish themselves on their properties they could lose their organic certification.

In areas that are designated GE free crop zones, the onus of responsibility is reversed.

"In a GE free zone, Monsanto would be accountable for environmental pollution if their seeds blew onto someone's property," Kyenne said.

Another compelling reason to designate GE free zones is to protect seed diversity and the right of farmers and small-scale growers to save seeds. Dan Jason, owner of Salt Spring Seeds, is an advocate of seed saving.

In the introduction to his 2006 catalogue, Dan writes about the dangers of terminator seeds. Plants grown from terminator seeds are designed to produce seed that is sterile, making it necessary for farmers to purchase new seed every year rather than simply saving their own.

Companies like Monsanto are keen proponents of terminator seeds. The Canadian and U.S. governments are also involved in terminator seed technology.

"In 2005, the Canadian government was actively promoting the technology of terminator seeds, despite an international moratorium on www.discoveryislander.ca them," Dan writes. "The U.S. government, not surprisingly, is co-owner of the patent on terminator seeds."

He goes on to say that with a handful of corporations controlling world seed markets and pursuing seeds for profit alone, "our heritage of seeds is threatened like never before."

Kyenne noted that people began planting and saving seeds more than 12,000 years ago. "The safety and strength of seeds, and their resistance to disease, is maintained by people growing and saving them in as many places as possible," she said.

One of the grave dangers of GE crops is that they replicate themselves, Kyenne added. "They can render the other varieties extinct because they crossbreed. A very small environmental pollution can become an enormous one."

Support for GE free crop zones and the labelling of GE foods is growing worldwide. Consumers are demanding organic, non-GE food products. Farmers and gardeners are growing and saving open-pollinated and heirloom seeds.

New Zealand and Australia have large GE free zones. Prince Edward Island is considering going GE free to ensure overseas markets will continue to buy their potatoes.

A total of 25 countries require the labelling of GE foods. Canada and the U.S. are not among them.

"North America is lagging and the dangers are being kept out of the public eye. People don't realise how fast this is happening," Kyenne said.

RDCS Chair and Area 'J' Director Jim Abram confirmed that the regional district has received the GE free zone petition from Kyenne. He said the RDCS is inviting further public input and discussion on this matter.

"This needs to be a community-driven initiative that is actively promoted to the regional district directors," he said.

To voice your opinion on the creation of a GE free crop zone for the RDCS contact your regional district representative: Jim Abram in Area 'J' (250-285-3355, fax 250-285-3533, e-mail abramfam@oberon.ark.com) and Jenny Hiebert in Area 'I' (250-935-6488, cell 250-202-6488, e-mail brijen@oberon.ark.com).

Of Viral Concern

A couple of weeks ago I had a brief visit from a nephew (by marriage) who has a disturbing and apocalyptic vision of our future. So much so that he brought me some material (including a small clear plastic cylinder full of metal shavings to absorb noxious electrical discharges) in order for me and my family to prepare for the coming Armageddon. Part of the preparations include hyper-cleanliness, purging of various internal organs and withdrawing from society. The reason my nephew has his knickers in a knot is that he is convinced that the H5N1 virus, commonly called the bird or avian flu, is ready to spread across the globe and knock us back into the dark ages, accompanied by billions of deaths. He has it on "good authority" (at this point he winks), for example, that St. Joseph's Hospital in Comox has laid in 'thousands' of body bags to deal with the coming carnage. Make no bones about it - this guy is in a panic over this thing. I, on the other hand, prefer to look at the matter a little more dispassionately, do my research, and then decide whether or not to freak.

I've actually been considering a column such as this for some time now, but was waiting for the "spark" to occur. It happened when I read Gwynne Dyer's views on the subject in the February 2006 issue of The Walrus. In "Waiting for the Pandemic" Dyer seems to accept that the possibility of a pandemic (occurring over a vast area as opposed to a more limited epidemic) involving H5N1 is very real. Apparently most leading scientists agree, though focussing on H5N1 might be a mistake. H5N1 cannot presently pass from human to human; it only can be passed from a bird to a human, which is the main reason the number of worldwide deaths is so low - about 70 at current count according to the World Health Organization. What does concern scientists is the possibility of a mutation of the virus that can transmit human to human, the nightmare scenario being if it could do so in an airborne manner.

Scientists are not the only ones taking the matter seriously. From Dyer's article - "In August 2005, a BMO-Nesbitt Burns report by Sherry Cooper and Donald Coxe entitled "An Investor's Guide to Avian Flu" concluded that the damage caused by "a pandemic, even one meaningfully less virulent than the 1918 influenza outbreak...could be comparable, at least for a short time, to the Great Depression" and "would trigger foreclosures and bankruptcies, credit restrictions and financial panics". He then goes on to list the woes we could suffer from travel restrictions, border closures, food shortages and mass unemployment. Not a pretty picture at all.

Writing in the UK newspaper The Register, Charles Arthur ("Bird Flu - We're all gong to die" - June 27, 2005) offers a darkly humorous look at the situation. He quotes an American scientist writing in the New England Journal of Medicine, and after making the usual doom and gloom predictions goes on - "Let's have some more numbers from Dr. Osterholm, just to encourage you. He writes: "It is sobering to realize that in 1968, when the most recent influenza pandemic occurred, the virus emerged in a China that had a human population of 790 million, a pig population of 5.2 million, and a poultry population of 12.3 million; today these populations number 1.3 billion, 508 million and 13 billion, respectively. Similar changes have occurred in the human and animal populations of other Asian countries, creating an incredible mixing vessel for viruses. Given this reality, as well as the exponential growth in foreign travel during the past 50 years, we must accept that a pandemic is coming - although whether it will be caused by H5N1 or by another novel strain remains to be seen." OK, freaking might be an appropriate reaction at this point.

Gwynne Dyer comes to our rescue with the good news that Canada is better prepared than...well, just about anyone. After noting the sorry state of preparedness around the globe, he writes, "Then there is Canada, one of the world's vaccine superpowers. In 2001 the Canadian government contracted with ID Biomedical, currently based in Vancouver, to develop the infrastructure to supply all Canadians with vaccines solely from domestic production, and last year it asked the firm to raise its production capacity to eight million doses of vaccine a month. Even allowing for two to three months to identify the new pandemic virus, create the vaccine and test it before going into mass production, the whole Canadian population could be covered in as little as seven months. What the British are planning to over the next several years, Canada has already done."

Two things sunk home from the foregoing statement. We in Canada are about as well prepared as we can be, and will be in the welcome position of being able to export significant quantities of surplus vaccine in the event of a pandemic. This is a great thing. But when the Canadian government orders a significant ramp-up in capability, at significant cost, something has to be up. This is unsettling. But even a cursory glance at historical precedents does seem to make the likelihood more of a certainty that we will indeed experience a pandemic, at some time, possibly soon. The question then becomes what does one do to prepare?

In a nutshell, the individual can do nothing except keep oneself in good health. Dyer seems optimistic, however, that a level of global awareness and cooperation is being reached that may result in the necessary effort to identify, contain and control outbreaks as they occur. In Thailand, for example, "the government has created a network of 750,000 volunteers spread throughout the country's villages and towns who are trained to spot and report both poultry and people suffering from avian influenza. An H5N1 infection could be confirmed within 24 hours, a one to two-day investigation would follow, and, the government believes, appropriate action could then be taken." This practise needs to be coordinated in all at-risk regions. And other countries need to immediately follow Canada's lead in virus preparation.

The Register's Arthur puts it this way - "All this has been noted by virologists and disease experts around the world. But what can we do? For one thing, listen to what they're saying, and put some pressure on politicians who are ignoring the threat, in the hope it will go away. Climate change may be a greater threat than terrorism, but a flu pandemic is a more immediate threat than either." And as his Dr. Osterholm wrote - "Frankly the crisis could for all we know have started last night in some village in Southeast Asia. We don't have the time to waste and even if we did have the time, the kind of things we need to do take years. Right now the best we can do is survive it. We need a Manhattan project yesterday". Maybe my nephew is on to something, but for now I'll pass on the purges and becoming a hermit. I will, however, keep the noxious electrical charge collector on my desk. You just never know...
